ABOUT RAAA

The Regional Aviation Association of Australia (RAAA) was formed in 1980 to support its members by working with Government, the regulatory authorities and the community.

It is the only organisation representing all sectors associated with regional aviation in Australia - this includes airlines, charter operators, aeromedical operations, airfreight operators, flying schools, airports, maintenance organisations, training organisations, engine and airframe manufacturers, insurers and financiers.

The RAAA argues strongly that regional aviation is a vital part of Australia's national infrastructure and aviation policy should be developed alongside policies supporting national quality education, health, telecommunications and rail/road/ port systems. Over four million Australians rely on regional aviation services. Without these services, the social and economic wellbeing of regional and remote communities and many regional industries would be at risk.

RAAA and its members are keen to ensure that regional communities continue to have access to cost effective, safe and efficient aviation services to reinforce the economic and social development of these communities.

To achieve this, the RAAA provides wide representation for its members and the broader regional aviation industry through direct lobbying of Ministers and senior officials parliamentary submissions; personal contact and through ongoing active participation in several consultative forums.

RAAA also:

- Contributes to government and regulatory authority policy processes using direct input from members
- Promotes and maintains a high public profile to inform community of the importance of aviation in the regional context
- Initiates, manages and participates in events that promote and support aviation and/or that provide exposure for regional aviation in Australia
- Facilitates the exchange of technical and other relevant information to RAAA members
- Provides a forum for formal and informal professional development and information sharing

The RAAA promotes the maintenance of a safe and viable regional aviation industry
